— Self-Care for Good Health —

Technical intern trainees experience various types of stress resulting from differences in language and lifestyle habits. Not infrequently, stress causes mental and physical disorders. Support from people around you is essential to maintaining your health, but you must also have a strong will to protect your health by yourself. This is called self-care. Regularly practicing self-care can make a large difference in your resistance to emotional and physical ailments. Therefore, acquire proper knowledge and measures against stress and lead a healthy technical intern life.

• Recognize signs of stress.

When you encounter a difficulty or hardship in daily life, you may temporarily find yourself in one or a number of the following conditions. These are signs of emotional discomfort. Therefore, early recognition of these signs is extremely important.

- You have trouble getting to sleep, but wake up too early in the morning.
- You feel insecure and tend to be agitated or ill-tempered.
- Your mind wanders, and you have trouble concentrating.
- You either lose your appetite or tend to overeat.
- Your body displays symptoms such as palpitations, headache, stomachache, etc.

Find ways to relieve stress.

Extreme stress can make you susceptible to emotional disorders, so you should try to relieve your stress before it gets worse. Find an activity in your daily life, such as listening to music, watching or playing sports, or engaging in a hobby, that you enjoy and will help you relax. Everyone has his own way of relaxing, but as the saying "A healthy mind in a healthy body" indicates, keeping regular hours, exercising moderately, and getting sufficient sleep and rest are basic requirements for everyone.

•Don't struggle alone.

When you feel insecure or angry due to stress, it might be a good idea to open up to a colleague or someone around you, or receive support from your family over the telephone. If you are unable to relieve your stress by yourself, do not struggle alone or hesitate to consult your lifestyle advisor or a consultant in your supervising organization. If symptoms such as depression, insomnia, or headache persist, seek early medical care.
